Lewis J. Robinson, Chair of Connecticut Board of Regents for Higher Education Delivers Keynote Speech at CONNTAC’s 45th Annual Scholarship Meeting

By Grantley S. Adams

Last October, the Connecticut Talent Assistance Cooperative (CONNTAC), held its forty-fifth Annual Breakfast Scholarship Meeting in Southern Connecticut State University’s Adanti Student Center Ballroom. The program slogan, “Education and the Role of Educational Access Programs” was the focus and highlighted throughout the very well executed program agenda.

After CONNTAC Executive Director Cecilia Nugent provided a succinct and eloquent Educational Access Update, which covered the activities, achievements, successes and challenges faced by the organization over the past year, Board President Kenneth Armstrong then rose to introduce the guest speaker, Lewis J. Robinson Jr., Esq. Mr. Armstrong, in his welcome to the audience directed his remarks specifically to the scholarship recipients, by strongly stating, “You are not alone, you’re with family, we need to share and encourage each other.” He concluded, “It is important to share with and recognize our students – they are our future windows of opportunity, our strength.”

Lewis J. Robinson, Jr. is a seasoned attorney with a comprehensive background in business, law, and government affairs, as well as charitable organizations. In 2012, he was appointed by Governor Dannel P. Malloy to serve as Chairman of the Connecticut Board of Regents for Higher Education. Mr. Robinson opened his remarks by thanking Ken Armstrong and Cecilia Nugent for executing such a successful breakfast meeting; he then proceeded to provide a brief overview of the Connecticut Board of Regents for Higher Education (BOR). The Connecticut State Colleges and Universities (CONNSCU) was established in the summer of 2011 as the successor to the Board of Trustees of the Connecticut Community-Technical Colleges through legislative action that consolidated most of the state’s public institutions of higher education under one governing Board of Regents. CONNSCU is comprised of the Connecticut State Universities, Charter Oak...

State College and the Connecticut Community Colleges. Mr. Robinson stated that in 7 out of 8 Counties in Connecticut, 35% of high school graduates want to attend a CONNSCU institution – 96,000 students wanting to better themselves. The attraction, according to the Board Chair is Price and Quality. “CONNSCU institutions offer the lowest sticker price and the lowest net price as compared to other University Systems, its reach is unparalleled in size and scope and for many students in Connecticut, CONNSCU is an efficient choice,” he declared.

Mr. Robinson then went on to talk about the significant but thorny issue of remediation. The Connecticut General Assembly voted in PA 12-40 (SB 40) – an Act concerning College readiness and completion that allows all students open access to entry level courses in a college level program and prohibits public institutions of higher education from forcing any student to enroll in a remedial course. He said that PA 12-40 requires all CONNSCU institutions to offer remedial support to their students by 2014, and by 2016, these institutions must have in place multiple assessment tools. “The Board’s goal is to have the best Higher Education System in the USA, where more students must graduate.”

The bill, according to published reports, would require public colleges to limit the remedial education requirements they impose on students to one semester and instead, provide more help to students in entry-level, for-credit courses. SB 40 would also require colleges to expand their evaluation systems for determining who needs remedial courses, and not rely solely on standardized entrance exams.

Mr. Robinson said that a part of the Board of Regents plan is to work with and improve K-12 levels of education, community health, higher education and general education, areas which are now incorporated in the Board of Regents. He rhetorically asked, “How do we prepare a student who is unprepared?” He continued, “Remedial education reform must be done right. The key to effectuating remediation is that the institution must be a part of the solution, students must run to the institution rather than run away from it when they feel stress.” The Chairman stated that the Board of Regents will continue working on making CONNSCU a better system. “CONNTAC’s functions help to prepare students for success. The support systems need to be in place before, during, and after the college experience is completed. We are in competition with other states, and globally on the higher education level and high school completions, college graduates and patents are the measure of success.”

In conclusion, Mr. Lewis J. Robinson, Jr., Esq., Chairman of the Connecticut Board of Regents for Higher Education assured the one hundred and seventy people gathered in the audience that the Board of Regents (BOR) will continue its ongoing partnership with the Connecticut Talent Assistance Cooperative (CONNTAC).

The 2013 National Educational Opportunity Centers Association Annual Conference

The National Educational Opportunity Centers Association (NEOCA) held its 2013 annual conference this year in Chicago, Illinois on September 7, 2013. CONNTAC-EOC staff members attending the conference had the honor of meeting guest speaker Dr. Brenda Dann-Messier, Assistant Secretary for Vocational and Adult Education. As a former Educational Opportunity Center (EOC) associate in Rhode Island, Dr. Dann-Messier expressed the importance of how EOC should be natural connectors for adult learners by increasing resources through collaborative partnerships with private and public sectors whose goals and missions are similar to Educational Opportunity Centers.

As CONNTAC, Inc. – Educational Opportunity Center began its new fiscal year on September 1, 2013 counselors have been busy with following up and introducing new clients to CONNTAC services to kick start another successful year for the students and program.

Ms. Turquoise McBride (photo to the right), provides an orientation on CONNTAC services with a brief overview of financial aid to about 20 incoming senior students at Quinebaug Middle College. The Council for Opportunity in Education’s 32nd Annual Conference

By Karen Touch

The Council for Opportunity in Education (COE) held its 32nd Annual Conference in the windy city of Chicago, Illinois on September 8-11, 2013. This year’s theme was, “Looking Back and Moving Forward: Reinvesting in Access and Success.” With that being said, the conference followed its theme fluently as speeches were made in recognition of Dr. Arnold Mitchem’s life works and achievements in the educational community and plans and initiatives to follow in continuing his mission.

The Annual Conference was not only a learning experience for TRiO professionals, but also an inspiring celebration of Dr. Arnold Mitchem’s retirement after his 30 years of fighting and advocating for the TRiO community.

The conference’s plenary sessions provided professionals with congressional updates and reminders that TRiO is embedded in discretionary spending. Thus, there was a heavy focus on the importance of keeping our programs alive and moving forward despite the fiscal threats that face us.

Overall, the Annual Conference was refreshing and empowering as TRiO Achievers reiterated the credo that “TRiO Works” and guest speakers encouraged their audience to heed the significance of learning from the past, realizing where we are today as a community, and understanding how we all need to work together to move the TRiO movement forward.
Attention Military Connected Students:
It’s not too early to research financial aid for college
By Karen Jowers
Email: kjowers@militarytimes.com

As military children and spouses begin to work on college applications for next year, why not start researching college scholarships and other financial assistance at the same time? Many scholarship applications are available starting in November and December. It’s not too early to come up with a game plan. There are many opportunities specifically for military spouses and children. Some are widely known; others not so much. For example:

- The Corvias Foundation has awarded more than $4.6 million in scholarships and grants to 92 children and 163 spouses of active-duty members since 2006. The foundation is part of Corvias Group, which operates military housing at Fort Rucker, Ala.; Fort Riley, Kan.; Fort Polk, La.; Fort Meade and Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.; Fort Bragg, N.C.; Fort Sill, Okla; McConnell Air Force Base, Kan.; Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.; Eglin Air Force Base and Hurlburt Field, Fla.; Eielson Air Force Base, Alaska; and Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, N.C. Children and spouses of active-duty troops from any branch of service stationed at one of these installations are eligible. Up to 10 military children a year receive awards of $50,000 per student, payable at up to $12,500 per year for four years. Also this year, a total of $100,000 was awarded to spouses of active-duty members with $5,000 each to 20 spouses pursuing degrees. www.corviasfoundation.org

- The ThanksUSA scholarship program for children and spouses recently awarded 300 scholarships totaling nearly $1 million. Since its founding in 2005 by sisters Rachel and Kelsi Okun – then ages 10 and 8 – ThanksUSA has awarded more than $9 million to military spouses and children. www.thanksusa.org

- More widely known are the education assistance programs offered by Army Emergency Relief, Air Force Aid Society, Navy-Marine Corps Relief Society and Coast Guard Mutual Assistance. Check online for application dates, forms and deadlines.

- The My Career Advancement Accounts program helps spouses of certain junior-ranking members with financial assistance toward pursuing licenses, certifications or associate degrees needed for employment in high-demand, high-growth portable career fields and occupations. https://aiportal.acc.af.mil/mycaa

Changes In 2014-2015 Free Application For Federal Student Aid

By Karen Touch

The Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) has to be completed by students every year in order for them to be considered for financial aid at the desired institution. As a result of completion rates being low in the past, tuition increases, and a rising need for financial assistance; there are often changes made on the application itself every school year, to better identify where financial need is most apparent and to ideally simplify the application process.

However, with the anticipated changes for the 2014-2015 FAFSA, there are questions that will be flooding professional financial aid offices everywhere. For the first time ever, the federal student aid system will now require the income and assets information of all would-be borrowers’ legal parents to be used for calculation of the student’s need (Field, 2013). In past applications, students seeking federal financial aid were only required to provide one parent’s income information if the parent was unmarried or in a same-sex marriage. With that being said, the U.S. Department of Education now believes that “all students should be able to apply for federal student aid within a system that incorporates their unique family dynamics,” (Education Department Announces Changes to FAFSA Form to More Accurately and Fairly Assess Students’ Need for Aid, 2013).

There will also be minor provisions made to gender specific questions. The Department of Education believes these revisions will provide a more accurate calculation with special family circumstances that are now evolving.

With the budget resolutions along with changes on the FAFSA application, it is inevitable that obtaining financial aid for higher education will become a more controversial, sensitive, nerve-wracking and time-consuming process for students and post-secondary administrators. As a result, there may be the risk of FAFSA completion rates remaining low because students will only become more intimidated and flustered with the evolved complexity of the FAFSA application.

There have been no reports as of yet on how many students will be affected by this, in any case it may seem that access to financial aid is getting beyond the reach of individuals as budget cuts/freezes continue and complex provisions are executed without consistency. Consequently, post-secondary education professionals may be under added pressure to disseminate complex information and sustain the enthusiasm of stressed individuals during the all-important financial aid process.
2011 Annual Breakfast Meeting

At CONNTAC’s 44th Annual Breakfast Meeting, held in December 2011, our Guest Speaker was Dr. Charles F. Desmond, Chairman of the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education. He began by affirming his appreciation of the work that CONNTAC and other agencies do in the community. Dr. Desmond recognized the importance of community colleges, “America’s battle for education and equality is happening in the community colleges across the country.” He also acknowledged that education in the state of Connecticut needed to be improved, “We need a revolution,” he asserted.

Chairman Desmond then reflected on his own life, stating that in his younger years his wonderful story was very different, he had endured a very difficult childhood and it was “Hell to go to school.” Then, as a soldier fighting in the Vietnam War, he was wounded and left for dead during The Tet Offensive. He recalls praying, “If I get out of here alive God, I promise that I would do everything in my life to help everyone.

Dr. Desmond observed that it is a special blessing to be in the business of educating others. He admitted that it is an ongoing fight to keep the needed funds flowing from Washington, DC but the battles which were born out of the struggles for Civil Rights must continue to be fought for education. He referred to it as a “Battle for Dollars.”

Dr. Desmond stressed that there is still a lot of work to be done, in closing he declared, “Ninety-nine percent of the people in this room have degrees, only one percent of the people in the street have degrees, let’s get up it is not about getting knocked down.”

Dr. Cathryn Addy said that working in Connecticut Community Colleges has been an honor and a privilege – missionary work. She said that the stories she heard from the 2011 Scholarship Recipients are common, heartwarming and scary. She recalled, from earlier in her career, when she was a teacher at the Manson Youth Facility, the students were intelligent, bright and interested in learning, but they had no structure and no mentors but some of them did move on successfully with their lives, “I wished that they all had access to an organization like CONNTAC.”
